The entire book is filled with large, close-up, color photographs of the examples! And the ideas are absolutely fantastic! Not only does she show you how to do brag books, scrapbooks, and journals, but she also gives wonderful and unique gift ideas as well that I'll be sure to try out, such as - Fragrant Bath Crystals Book (complete with a super-easy recipe for making the Bath Crystals yourself!), Seed Book and miniature books. I was also intrigued by her style of decorating the books. She has a section on different ways to not only decorate the cover, but the paper as well! Not something I have seen a lot of in other books about bookbinding. The only criticism I have is that there were not very many different methods of binding discussed - basically only 3 different kinds (perhaps this is best for someone just beginning). However, the wealth of unique decorating and project ideas more than makes up for this. The beginner as well as the seasoned bookbinder will get wonderful tips and ideas from this book. I own several books on this subject, but still feel that this book is a very valuable asset to my collection. The color photos make her directions easy to follow, and her unique ideas will inspire you!

I love the realm of the handmade/homemade and this book is on my beginner level. She has almost used every media to cover her books and her designs are wonderful. It is a very good beginner to intermediate level. It's just a fun wonderful level to be at. When you are done using her book you will be ready for the advance levels. My favorites are the Envelope books on pages 106-111. They are very practical and beautiful. A lot of covers get pressed flowers! Yes I love my copy. Thank you Marie Browning

The items needed to complete your project are listed, include the tools (such as clips) that you might not think of before you start. There are a variety of books you can make, so just about everyone can find something to do either for themselves or as a gift. There are also some really cool ideas for really different types of books. I think anyone from young to old can find something to make in this book, do it without much trouble.

Browning...has an artistic touch that sets her book apart....Her projects make good use of handmade paper, natural objects, and currently popular decorative techniques such as thermal embossing. Step-by-step instructions are given for making bindings and lacing entirely from scratch....Excellent addition to public library collections. Library Journal.

.com Craft designer Marie Browning has a knack for inventing wonderful books. Her exquisite creations are shown to great advantage in Handcrafted Journals, Albums, Scrapbooks More in excellent photographs, and are well explained in step-by-step directions. Folded books, envelope books, and simple bound books come alive with decorative papers (for which she also provides instructions), textural covers, artfully threaded bindings, and lovely embellishments like metal charms, pressed flowers, clip-art labels, ribbons, embossed stamps, and more. Most projects are fairly easy, requiring more patience and time than advanced crafting skill. (For slightly more advanced techniques, consult a volume like Sue Doggett's Bookworks). Browning even includes some clever novelty books, such as wandering books (accordion-fold types that meander when opened) and elegant little covers for sticky notes and message pads. This is a beautiful book about making beautiful books. --Amy Handy
