Helen's story makes her storytellers come alive. What creativity and imagination. A true artist. She uses her gift of making her clay figures come alive and tell a story.

Native American artist Helen Cordero (19151994) is best known for her remarkable clay Storytellersfigures covered with tumbling children. Get to know her work, and that of other artists from the Cochiti Pueblo in New Mexico. Unique activities encourage kids to use their imagination, to explore the details of the sculptures and to think like an artist.
