Recipes are useless, all use palm oilBy Elena SoriaI got this book as a gift. It has some tips that I didn't see on internet so I was excited it was giving me something I didn't have for free already. However from the 31 "unique" cold-soap process soaps recipes, 27 are made with Palm oil, which I refuse to use so they are totally useless, because if you change one oil you have to do all the calculations again and the results will be different.The author is Bramble Berry's owner, she sells it on their web with the note that the supplier they use is a member of RSPO, but they don't say the name. Plus, not everyone will buy from them, therefore all the book is promoting the use of Palm oil from other sources.I'm a new soaper, and didn't know nothing about the issue with palm oil, but after reading many soapers refuse to use it, I educated myself and I'm not using it either. With all the oils around I don't see why Anne-Marie couldn't be more creative and use another "must" oil, like other soapers do, to write a good recipe book.
